Dear Alumnae,

It is a joy and a privilege to welcome you back and to celebrate the bond we continue to share. Though you have moved on to different paths and achieved success in your chosen fields, you will always remain a cherished part of the JBAS family. Message from the Convenor

It gives me great pleasure to share the latest milestones from the halls you once walked. I am proud that the JBAS News Bulletin serves as a bridge to reconnect our community and celebrate the achievements of our college.

Looking back at my years as an Alumna of the Department of English, Class of 1997, at Justice Basheer Ahmed Sayeed College for Women, I realise that college was much more than a place of education—it was where many of my dreams, values and friendships took shape. It is a matter of great joy and pride to reconnect with my alma mater and its cherished alumnae. The knowledge and experiences gained here continue to inspire and guide us throughout our lives.

Today, as I look back with gratitude, I feel truly blessed to have been a part of this institution. Though many years have passed, the memories remain close to my heart, and the connection with my alma mater continues to be special.

At a seminar on "Navigating The Future: Emerging Psychological Trends in Education and Healthcare", conducted by the Department of Applied Psychology and Behavioral Research at the Justice Basheer Ahmed Sayeed College for Women (JBAS) College for Women on Tuesday, eminent speakers spoke on psychological trends, solution-focused therapy, evolving approaches to mental healthcare and other related topics.

At the inaugural session of the two-day seminar, J. Radhakrishnan, Director of the Aruna Administrative Staff College and Director General of Training, spoke about building resilient healthcare systems, lessons from COVID-19, and mental health from a bureaucratic perspective. "Whether responding to the 2004 Indian Ocean tsunami, dengue outbreaks, the COVID-19 pandemic, or other public emergencies, one lesson has remained constant, which is about how resilience is built before a crisis, tested during a crisis, and strengthened after a crisis," he said.

"Mental healthcare in Tamil Nadu has progressively shifted from institution-based care towards community-centred recovery. A notable example is the Emergency Care and Recovery Centre (ECRC) model, which provides rescue, treatment, rehabilitation, and social reintegration for homeless persons with mental illness," he said.

Anshul Azees, principal and correspondent of JBAS spoke on the influence of Artificial Intelligence.

At the inaugural session, Dr. Savithri Krishnan Endowment lecture was instituted in honour of the late senior lecturer at the college Savithri Krishnan, who laid the foundation of its Department of Psychology. Reminiscences

A Decade Later… The Memories Still Remain a Journey from J.B.A.S. College for Women to a Lifetime of Memories

Ten years have passed since I completed my journey at J.B.A.S. College for Women, but whenever I think about my college days, it still feels like it was just yesterday. Time may have moved on, but the memories, friendships and lessons I received during those three beautiful years continue to remain close to my heart.

As a student of B.A. History, I was fortunate to be guided by wonderful teachers and, especially, by our beloved H.O.D. Ma'am. Our department staff were not just teachers to us; they treated us with so much affection, care and understanding. Their friendly nature made the department feel like a second home.

What made our History classes truly special was the way our teachers taught us. When we studied Ancient History, their teaching had the magic of taking us back to that period. We could almost imagine ourselves living in those times and witnessing the events as they happened. And when we moved on to Modern History, it felt as though we had travelled forward in time and returned to the world around us. They had a wonderful way of making even the most difficult historical events easy to understand and interesting to learn.

I was also fortunate to serve as the Department Secretary during my college days. This gave me a special opportunity to interact more closely with our teaching and non-teaching staff. Those moments of conversation, responsibility and togetherness are among the memories I treasure the most.

Looking back after ten years, I realise that college gave me much more than a degree. It gave me confidence, friendships, unforgettable experiences and teachers who left a lasting impression on my life.Today, as a homemaker, life has taken me in a completely different direction. Yet, whenever I look back and think about the best memories of my life, my college days at J.B.A.S. College for Women will always have a very special place in my heart.

Ten years have passed, but the memories have never grown old. I may have left the college in 2016, but a part of me will always remain a student of J.B.A.S. College for Women.

"Some places give us an education. Some places give us memories. J.B.A.S. gave me both."

Achievements & Milestones

I find it difficult to name a single favourite teacher, for every member of the faculty in my department contributed something invaluable — be it a new perspective, a piece of guidance, or simply their patience with us. Without their unwavering support, achieving the 1st Rank with Distinction would never have been possible.

Seminars, too, hold a special place in my memory. Presenting before an audience for the very first time was a nerve-wracking experience, but Mallika Ma'am and my Head of Department, Nazeemunisa Ma'am, encouraged me with great confidence, assuring me I could do it. I went on to present well and received commendable remarks from our guest — a moment I continue to cherish with pride.

I also fondly recall gathering with my friends beneath the java plum tree, our beloved nagapalam, before every examination — trading stories to calm our nerves, saying, "Aafrin, tell me this story, tell me that." Somehow, between those shared stories and collective anxieties, we made it through one CIA and one semester after another, together.

The culturals were undoubtedly the highlight of every semester — ramp walk practice, dance rehearsals, speech preparations, and the eager anticipation of our guests' arrival. Inter-college competitions further enriched our journey, taking us to quiz contests, drawing, sketching, and mono-acting events across various colleges —each one a memory to cherish.

Equally memorable was our beloved canteen, where we gathered for conversation over hot samosas, sambar rice with ghee, and steaming cups of chai, occasionally capturing stolen moments with our phones in the classroom. I still fondly recall my very first day at college, when a senior kindly guided us through the entire campus.

Another unforgettable memory is of the Vardha Cyclone in 2015, which led to over a month of college holidays — each day beginning with preparations to attend, only to receive news of yet another closure.

JBAS gave me far more than a degree — it gave me mentors who believed in me, friends who stood beside me, and memories that I shall carry with pride for a lifetime.

Reminiscences

Between the Lines of Memory

The very first picture of entering the college still runs through my memories. Nervous to see a whole lot of crowd, with no familiar faces beside. Thoughts of all kinds and the imagination to finish the college the very next moment all feels like a comic scene now.

Taking the first move to find a new friend is absolutely difficult, likely for the introverts like me. But those are the memories now we would like to cherish forever.

There was a time when we counted the days until college ended. We waited for the final examination, the last assignment, the last attendance, the last morning when we had to hurry through the gates. We imagined freedom waiting for us beyond the college walls. We thought the best days were somewhere ahead.

We did not know that some of the best days were already happening. College was never only about classrooms and textbooks. It was about the people who slowly became familiar faces and then became friends. It was about conversations that began before class and somehow continued long after it.

All kinds of mischief that had happened during the time is still some of the precious moments in our lives. Perhaps the very peaceful days we lived through.

We complained about deadlines, but now we would happily take one more assignment if it meant sitting together again.

We complained about early mornings, but now even an ordinary college morning feels precious in memory.

We complained about examinations, but somehow we miss the nervous laughter that came just before them.

Time has a peculiar way of transforming ordinary moments into treasures. Years after leaving college, we may forget the exact questions we answered in an examination. We may forget what we wore on a particular day or what lecture we attended. But we remember who sat beside us. We remember who made us laugh when we were worried. We remember the people who stayed when things were difficult.

It gives us memories while we are too busy living them to realize their worth. When we return to the corridors we realize where we once walked without knowing how quickly those footsteps would become memories. Perhaps we have changed. Our lives have taken different directions. We have new responsibilities, new dreams and new stories to tell. Yet when we meet again, something familiar remains.

For a few precious hours, we are not strangers shaped by years and distance. We are once again the students who laughed too loudly, worried too much, dreamed endlessly and believed that the people beside us would always be there. They remind us that although time moves forward, memories sometimes wait patiently for us to return.

Older, certainly busier—but still carrying a little piece of those college days within us.

To realize now that the days and time spent can never be brought back nor it can be recreated. But still it is within us reminding us that time Stops for none and makes us learn to cherish every moment of our life.

Because the days we once wanted to leave behind… are the very days we now wish we could live once more.

A Journey of Learning and Growth

My college journey has been an important part of my academic and personal growth. I completed my B.Sc. in Clinical Nutrition and Dietetics and pursued my M.Sc. in Child Development and Child Nutrition, which strengthened my interest in nutrition, child development and education.

One of the significant milestones in my PG academic journey has been qualifying the UGC-NET examination for Assistant Professor. This achievement has encouraged me to pursue my interest in teaching and higher education.

I am grateful to my teachers for their guidance and encouragement, and to my alma mater for providing a positive campus environment that supported my learning and growth. The experiences and memories I gained during my college days will always remain special to me.

As I move forward, I hope to continue learning, contribute to the field of education and inspire others through my work.

Where Memories Met Growth - Looking Back on the Years That Shaped Me

My undergraduate years at JBAS College for Women began with almost no expectations. Yet, when I look back today, I realise that those years quietly became some of the richest and most formative years of my life.

For someone who had grown up in a fairly conventional and protected environment, college introduced me to a world that was completely new. Even something as simple as travelling independently by public transport felt like a milestone. Over time, the experiences grew bigger.

One of the most memorable experience was the opportunity to serve as a Student Press Reporter with the Vikatan Group of Publications. As someone who had always enjoyed reading and writing, this opportunity was especially meaningful to me, and it became possible through the encouragement and support I received from the college management and my Head of the Department, Dr. Shareefa Talha. She was a constant source of motivation and always encouraged me to explore opportunities beyond academics. Experiences such as these took me beyond the classroom and gradually introduced me to independence, responsibility, and a world beyond the familiar boundaries of home and college.

I was naturally reserved and introverted. Approaching people did not come easily to me, and there were many occasions when I hesitated, felt confused, made mistakes, or wondered whether I had done the right thing. Looking back, I now understand that those moments were just as important as the successes. They, too, were part of growing up.

One regret I still carry is that I did not volunteer to become a Department Representative or participate more actively in the Students' Union. If I could offer one piece of advice to young students, it would be this: take up responsibilities whenever you can. Volunteer. Organise. Represent your class. Participate. These experiences shape you in ways that textbooks cannot. They teach communication, confidence, problem-solving, leadership, and the ability to work with people. These are skills that remain valuable in every phase of life, whether one builds a career, pursues higher education, supports a family, manages a home, or simply navigates relationships with greater maturity.

Academically, I found comfort in learning. I enjoyed taking detailed notes, preparing for examinations, and understanding my subjects well. My love for languages made English and French particularly enjoyable, and I remain grateful to the respective departments for their encouragement and support. I remember wishing that we could have continued studying more language papers even in our final year.

My own department, Home Science, was truly a wonderful knowledge hub. I remain deeply grateful to all my teachers who guided us through those years. From the day I first entered the college with my father for admission until the day we graduated, every faculty member and laboratory attendant supported us through the different phases of our course work. Their guidance, patience, and encouragement added immensely to our college experience.

Our classroom was wonderfully diverse. We came from different academic, economic, and cultural backgrounds and brought with us varying levels of exposure and experience. In the beginning, we were simply a group of students brought together by a course. By the time we reached our final year, however, we had blended beautifully, grown comfortable with one another, and built friendships that made college life all the more memorable.

Years later, I find myself valuing those experiences in an entirely different way. Life today often moves at an exhausting pace, and I have come to realise how therapeutic it can be to slow down and create something with one's hands. I still carefully preserve my old embroidery hoops, fabric-painting brushes, and some of the materials from those days. Whenever I take them out, they feel like small pieces of my college life preserved in time.

When I think of my college today, I do not remember only classrooms, examinations, or marks. I remember becoming a little more independent, discovering my strengths, understanding my limitations, and slowly finding my place in the world.

College gave me much more than an education. It gave me experiences whose true value I understood only with the passage of time.

Those truly were the days, and my undergraduate years at JBAS College will always remain a very special chapter of my life.

Leadership Skills for Young Professionals - Beyond the Classroom: My Journey from a BBA Student to a Portfolio Manager in Dubai

Looking back at my BBA days, I remember saying "yes" to every opportunity: cultural events, intercollegiate competitions, and student leadership. Becoming the Department Secretary taught me that success is not measured by trophies but by the confidence, resilience, and leadership we build through participation.

After graduation, I dreamed of pursuing higher studies in Dubai. However, financial circumstances and family responsibilities led me to begin my career as a Business Coordinator in Chennai. That first opportunity, made possible through a college friend, became the foundation of my professional journey. Determined to achieve my childhood dream, I moved to Dubai, where months of interviews and rejections eventually led me to build a rewarding career in one of the world's most dynamic real estate markets. Alhamdulillah, today I work as a Portfolio Manager in Dubai's real estate industry.

My advice to students is simple: build your communication skills and embrace every opportunity. Keep learning, trust the process, and remember- small, consistent steps can take you further than you ever imagined. Stay true to your values, because wherever life takes you, your words and actions reflect your family, your teachers, your friends, and the institution that shaped you. Living and working in a multicultural city like Dubai has reinforced my belief that integrity, discipline, and respect earn trust across cultures.

Believe in your journey, even when the destination isn't clear. One day, you'll look back and realize that every small step brought you exactly where you were meant to be.

Ethical use of Al in Education

As a competitive Exam Aspirant I can give a very interesting

Note that our Al has become a daily part of life. It should be a tutor not the replacement for our brain but in the meantime a student like us should definitely make use of Al so that we can make our study Journey a easier ones

- To avoid mistakes
- To save our valuable time
- By practicing many shortcuts, and making it easier to understand the concepts, it becomes our cute study partner.
- Avoid sharing personal information and data
- Avoid using someone else's work

Keep in mind that Al is not here to do our Education for us it's here to make us better learners, researchers and brainstormers.

Voice, Vision, and Impact: Leadership & Communication

Transitioning from a BBA student to an Assistant Professor taught me that leadership isn't a title—it is a daily practice.

During my college days, performing in college fests helped me conquer stage fear and built my confidence as a public speaker. Today, I use those exact experiences to organize events at Bon Secours College.

To every young student reading this: don't let fear hold you back. Whenever an opportunity presents itself, grab the mic, step into the spotlight, and push past your comfort zone! True leadership begins with initiative and clear communication. Your degree gives you knowledge, but your voice creates impact—so embrace every chance to step up and speak!

College is More Than Just a Degree

When I joined BBA, I believed college was all about earning good marks and getting a degree. But after graduating, I realized college offers something much greater like it shapes our personality, confidence and future.

The classroom teaches business concepts, but college teaches life skills. Through presentations, group projects, NSS camps, seminars, and college events, I learned communication, teamwork, leadership, and problem solving skills that companies value just as much as academic knowledge.

Not every experience was a success. There were failures, challenges and moments of self doubt. But those experiences taught me resilience, adaptability and the confidence to keep moving forward.

To every student, my advice is simple: don't limit yourself to textbooks. Participate in activities, take internships, build new skills, network with people, and make the most of every opportunity. These experiences will prepare you for the real world far better than marks alone.

A degree may open the first door, but your skills, attitude and experiences will determine how far you go. Make your college years meaningful, because college is not just about earning a degree, it's about becoming the best version of yourself.

The Girl Who Walked In, The Woman Who Walked Out

Sometimes the smallest step in the right direction ends up being the biggest step of your life.

When I first walked into college, I knew I was stepping into a completely new chapter of my life. Coming from a girls' Muslim school, college was my first experience of being part of an environment where people from different religions, cultures, backgrounds and personalities came together. Everything felt new—the people, the environment, the freedom and even the idea of finding my own place in such a diverse space.

At first, it was challenging. But somewhere along the way, college became more than just a place where I came to study. It became the place where I slowly learned to step beyond the person I was comfortable being.

One of my first steps in that direction was putting myself forward as a class representative. What initially seemed like a small responsibility turned out to be the beginning of something much bigger. It pushed me to communicate with my classmates, take responsibility and, most importantly, find the confidence to speak up.

From then on, I began saying yes to opportunities that I might once have hesitated to take. I participated in events, took up responsibilities, spoke on stage, helped organise programmes and explored entrepreneurship through the Young Entrepreneur Development Council (YEDC).

My journey with YEDC began as an Event Executor and eventually led me to becoming its President for 2025–2026. Through events such as Innovora '25 and Souq '26, along with seminars, competitions and entrepreneurship programmes, I learned that leadership is not simply about having a title. It is about taking ownership, working with people, handling unexpected challenges and turning an idea into something real.

There were moments when things did not go according to plan, moments when I had to make decisions quickly and moments when I questioned whether I was capable of handling what was in front of me. But each of those moments taught me something. With every responsibility I took on, I became a little more confident than I had been before.

My internship was another important step in that journey. As part of my degree, I had the opportunity to experience a professional workplace for the first time. Moving from classrooms, assignments and college activities into a professional environment introduced me to a different set of responsibilities and expectations. It gave me practical exposure and taught me how to work as part of a team beyond the familiar surroundings of college.

More than anything, the internship made the transition from student life to the working world feel a little less unfamiliar. It was a reminder that the experiences we collect in college often prepare us for things we do not yet know are coming.

Yet, when I look back at my three years, the things I value most are not the positions I held or the events I organised - They are the people.

College gave me friendships that I hope will last far beyond graduation. People who began as classmates gradually became friends, confidants and an important part of my life. There are conversations, inside jokes, shared meals, last-minute plans, stressful deadlines and countless ordinary moments that may not seem significant now, but I know I will miss them someday.

I was also fortunate to have teachers who were much more than teachers to me. They encouraged me, corrected me, supported me and believed in me, sometimes even when I did not have complete confidence in myself. Their guidance became an important part of my growth, both inside and outside the classroom.

Over these three years, I had the privilege of meeting people from different walks of life—friends, teachers, seniors, juniors and many others. Each person left behind a lesson, a memory or simply a moment that made my college experience what it was.

And perhaps that is what makes leaving college so bittersweet.

When I think about my college journey now, I do not see it simply as three years spent earning a degree. I see it as three years of becoming.

The classrooms gave me knowledge.
The events gave me experience.
The responsibilities taught me accountability.
Leadership gave me confidence.
The people gave me memories.
And stepping outside my comfort zone gave me the courage to discover who I could become.

Perhaps that is what college is truly meant to be. Not just a place that prepares us for a career, but a place that gives us the space to grow, make mistakes, meet people, take chances and slowly become the person we are meant to be.

As I move forward into a new chapter, I know I am leaving behind more than a campus. I leave with a degree, but I also leave with friendships, lessons, experiences, memories and a little more courage than I had when I arrived.

The journey ahead is new and unfamiliar—but perhaps that is not something to be afraid of anymore.

After all, I learned how to step beyond my comfort zone right here.

Reminiscence of My College Days

Wow, it was awesome. College days were undoubtedly one of the most memorable phases of my life. They were filled with excitement, learning, friendships, and countless experiences that helped shape my personality.

I still fondly remember my first day at college, when I was both nervous and excited about entering a new environment. As the days passed, I made wonderful friends who became an important part of my journey. We attended classes together, worked on projects, prepared for examinations, and shared many joyful moments.

I still fondly remember my first day at college, when I stepped through its gates with dreams fluttering in my heart like young leaves greeting the first rays of spring. The faces around me were unfamiliar, like seeds scattered across a vast field, each carrying a story yet to unfold. Little did I know that some of those seeds would grow into mighty trees of friendship, their roots intertwining with mine deep beneath the soil of shared experiences.

As the years passed, time moved like a patient gardener, nurturing us through seasons of joy, challenges, success, and change. The saplings we once were slowly grew, branching out in different directions as careers, families, and responsibilities shaped our lives. Yet, despite the distance and the passing decades, the roots of those friendships remained firmly connected, drawing strength from the memories we created together.

Today, when I look back, those college days feel like a beautiful garden in perpetual bloom. The laughter we shared became blossoms of happiness, the lessons we learned became rings of wisdom within our trunks, and the friendships we forged have stood the test of time like an ancient banyan tree, ever-growing, ever sheltering, and ever-present. Twenty-two years may have passed like changing seasons, but the bonds we nurtured continue to flourish, proving that true friendship is not measured by time, but by the depth of its roots and the strength of its growth.

Beyond academics, college life was enriched by cultural events, sports activities. These experiences taught me teamwork, leadership, and the importance of balancing responsibilities with enjoyment. The laughter shared in the classrooms, conversations in the canteen, and last-minute exam preparations remain unforgettable memories.

My professors also played a significant role in guiding and inspiring me. Their encouragement helped me develop confidence and pursue my goals with determination.

Today, when I look back, I realize that college was not just about earning a degree. It was a period of personal growth, lifelong friendships, and valuable lessons that continue to influence my life. The memories of those wonderful years will always hold a special place in my heart.

Journey of my College Life

The journey of my college life started on July 3rd 2023. Getting into a new phase of world with lots of expectation and fear of the upcoming days about meeting new persons, new friends and teachers. The thought in my mind for choosing B.Com Corporate Secretaryship will be interesting as well as funny. I hated maths in my 12th standard so I wanted to pursue a course without maths and the second reason is that I like the name Corporate Secretaryship since it gives a high position about myself and a sense of happiness while telling the degree name.

In first semester, I was being allotted to different scribes for the CIA exams in which I gained experiences and collected wonderful memories. The result of first semester were release, I was almost satisfied and joyful to be the class first.

Education Beyond the Classroom

Education is more than a qualification. It is the foundation that empowers individuals to bring, dream, lead, and create meaningful change.

Looking back as an alumna of Justice Basheer Ahmed Sayeed College for Women, I realise that the greatest lessons I learnt were not confined to textbooks but were shaped through experiences, opportunities, and people around me. As both a Rank holder and the former Vice President of The Students' Core Majlis (2025-2026), I have understood that education is not about being the best. It is about becoming the best version of yourself. Every examination, every stage, every leadership role, and every challenge taught me discipline, resilience and responsibility.

Academic excellence gave me confidence, while leadership taught me empathy, teamwork, and service. Together they transformed me into a more capable and compassionate individual. One lesson that remains close to my heart is that no field of study defines a person's potential. As a proud student of the Department of English, I often encounter misconceptions about the scope of the course. Instead of allowing those opinions to limit me, I chose to let my achievements speak for themselves. Education empowered me to overcome criticism and prove that passion, dedication, and perseverance matter far more than labels.

Behind every achievement stands an Institution that believes in its students. My professors encouraged me to dream fearlessly. I had supportive friends. And most importantly I had a very supportive root: my Parents and my College. The campus and the environment transformed my education into a lifelong experience through every milestone and my College provided countless opportunities to learn beyond the classroom. Those experiences shaped not only my career but also my character. True education empowers us to think critically, serve selflessly, and lead with integrity.

As an alumna, I will always carry the values and essence of JBAS with pride and gratitude. This institution gave me much more than education. It gave me confidence, purpose, lifelong memories and encouraged me to believe in myself. Every experience, every challenge, and every achievement has shaped the person I am today. To me, that is the true power of education. It does not simply prepare us for a career, it transforms the way we see ourselves, inspires us to dream bigger, and leaves an impact that stays with us for a lifetime.

Where Memories Become Milestones

College life never comes beneath a single umbrella, it arrives like rain, showering us with countless colours,
painting our days with laughter, friendships,
and memories we carry long after we leave.
It awakens something within each of us,
gently turning our eyes towards tomorrow,
teaching us to dream, to hope,
and to look ahead towards our future.

And then come the teachers
the hands that mould us, the voices that guide us, the mentors who see what we fail to see in ourselves.
They shape us in such a way that even we stand surprised, discovering the strength and talent
we had been carrying within us all these days.

Years may pass, classrooms may change,
and the college gates may slowly fade behind us,
but no one ever truly forgets college life.

We remember not only the friends who walked beside us through those unforgettable days, but also the teachers and mentors who walked ahead of us, showing us the way
the guiding lights, the real heroes, and the role models who quietly became a part of the person we were meant to become.

Soldiers in white coat

Soldiers in white coat, a soul appears from the door
Stethoscope in neck, confidence on face walks on floor when he sit there's start of disease war still listens to everyone with ear core

Always drugs smell are in surroundings still in duty he's never failing.
Not in family roof but hospital is his staying,
So that other family lives smiling

Experience of his life is as equal as adventure blood, injection, knife, scissors are like good bencher Dealing with accidents, trauma, pains is part of his career
but doesn't tremble out of fear

He's the one who drags out first breath in the world
also hears the ending last breaths word.
For them sorry are hardest to spell
and thank you are pleasant when patients get well Today human cycle spin around because they volunteer in the round.
Not only green uniform lives who gets devote but also to save someone, doctors are ready in white coats.

The Tapestry of My College Days

In those echoing halls,
I found myself—
A girl, wide-eyed, stepping into a world
Where rules felt soft, and freedom whispered

In every giggle, every hurried step,
We roamed the campus like queens of time,
Bunked lectures to chase the breeze,
Yet burned the midnight oil,
Turning coffee into confidence,
And pages into dreams.

There was laughter, loud and reckless,
The kind that lingers in your chest
Long after the joke is gone.
There were tears too, soft and fleeting,
Falling like summer rain
Over crushed plans, unspoken words.

We carried it all—the chaos, the joy,
In the books and in hearts.
I topped the class, yes,
But only after I learned to lose
My fears, my doubts,
And sometimes my way—
Only to find it again in the arms of friends,
In the shade of old trees
That knew our secrets.

Making my parents proud,
I fulfil my dad's dream,
Becoming a professor, just like him.

Now, as I walk these halls again,
No longer a student but a professor,
It feels like stepping into a living memory,
Each classroom a page from my past,
Each bench a witness to my story.
The pride of teaching where I once learned
Wraps me in warmth,
But my college still calls me back—
To its untamed spirit, its carefree laughter,
The place where I truly began.

These days are a patchwork of joy and growth,
A tapestry I carry, vibrant and alive,
Woven with the threads of yesterday's girl
And today's woman.

Happy tears!!

Coming from different roads called school
Joining in a path called college,
From 1st year to last year
It's a battle - it's a battle man!
Corona, exam, online online..
We could rarely meet up-
All these years:
We have spent nearly one and half years,
Or may be less than that - but
We created the most unforgetable memories,
From traditional day to cultural day
to no order day.

From A to Z all the names in the alphabet
Play an important role to me
It's time to bid farewell guys,
Consumed with both sad and good memories

Our journey of togetherness is going to end – but our bond of friendship will not be broken - it will be as stable as a covalent bond,
May everyone reach the heights,
Be the top as the name indicates !!
HAPPY TEARS!!! EVERYONE

Expectations

I had expected the seasons to change,
the days to roll,
the calendars that we've hung on our walls
to be replaced by another, one after the other.

I had expected the time to speed,
the world to change,
and if I were honest with myself,
even the Signs of the Hour to appear over the horizon.

I had expected a tight schedule,
multiplied responsibilities,
stuff that would prove too hard to juggle.
I had anticipated a rocky road,
several evasive turns,
a broken heart that would have seen
one too many a mending.

I had expected for us to be waylaid by life,
to be robbed of our peace,
to become too invested in our own lives –
jobs, higher studies or families, whichever we chose to concentrate on.

What I had not expected, however,
was to be reduced
into another name
in your contact list.

The Art of Becoming

Somewhere between who we were and who we hope to be,
life quietly changes us.

Not through grand occasions,
but through ordinary mornings,
unexpected turns,
and little moments
that stay with us longer than expected.

Growth rarely announces itself.
It arrives like rain—
slowly touching the earth,
changing its colour
without asking for permission.

We learn to carry questions
without demanding immediate answers.
We learn that some roads
are meant to bend,
some doors are meant to close,
and some dreams
are meant to take a different shape.

Time becomes a patient teacher.
It reminds us that even the sky
does not hold the same colours forever.
Sunsets surrender to darkness,
and darkness, in its own time,
makes room for morning.

Perhaps becoming is not about having everything figured out.
Perhaps it is about listening
when life speaks softly,
finding meaning in change,
and allowing ourselves
to grow beyond old versions of who we were.

We are all unfinished poems—
our stories still finding their rhythm,
our pages still waiting for words.
And maybe that is the beauty of life:

We do not have to know exactly who we will become.
We only have to keep turning the page

My College Days

Those college days still live softly in my heart,
Where Biochemistry became more than just a subject.
I learned, I laughed, I grew, and made memories along the way,
Friends and teachers turned ordinary days into special ones,
And no matter where I go, my college will always be a part of me.

From the Chaos to the Peace

After the same pattern for Fourteen years,
The chaos started and life pierced.
Shattered in thoughts lost in Doubts,
Chose a path with a pout.

Big place and coloured Dress,
New beginning with little stress.
A Hand held at that time,
None other than seniors of mine.
Year passed with the shine,
Ended with Mysore's Time.

Reality hit when time shifted,
With good company everything lifted.
Time to explore and step out of comfort zone,
But with my people every place became own.
The part of Outreach
tied us with Beach.
With a short film and fun on Max,
Another year touched Climax.

The time came which we waited,
With the twist which we never wanted.
From the memories of Hyderabad
To the thesis.
The year was filled with all experience.
From hosting farewells to facing mine,
Thanks to the seven pillars for every fine.

From the chaos to the peace,
That's the story of my piece.
For the lesson and the bond,
Forever Grateful for What I Found.

Returning to our beloved institution for this Alumnae Meet is not merely a reunion; it is a journey back to a place that shaped our lives, careers, and values. For many of us, this college has been more than an educational institution. It has been a second home, a source of inspiration, and a foundation upon which we built our future.A special word of appreciation is due to the visionary Management whose dedication, leadership, and unwavering commitment have played a pivotal role in the growth and success of the institution. Their efforts have ensured that the institution remains a centre of learning, innovation, and opportunity for all who pass through its gates.

The college's achievements are not measured solely by infrastructure, rankings, or accolades, but by the countless lives it has touched and transformed. Its classrooms have nurtured dreams, its corridors have witnessed lifelong friendships, and its faculty and staff have shaped individuals who now contribute meaningfully to society across diverse fields.For those of us who have had the privilege of serving this institution, the memories remain priceless.

The shared experiences, the dedication of colleagues, the enthusiasm of students, and the collective pursuit of excellence continue to inspire us even today. Dear Alumnae,
Warm greetings to all of you

As I look back on the years spent at JBAS, I am filled with gratitude for the many memories, relationships, and experiences that made the journey so meaningful. Beyond the lessons taught in classrooms, it is the people we meet and the lives we touch that make an institution truly special. Over the years, I have had the privilege of watching many young minds grow, discover their strengths, overcome challenges, and find their own paths in life. Seeing students move forward with confidence and purpose is one of the most fulfilling aspects of being a teacher.

As you continue on your individual journeys, I hope you will always cherish the memories of your student days, the friendships you made, and the values you carried with you from here. Stay connected with one another, support each other, and continue to inspire the generations that follow. May your lives be filled with happiness, purpose, and fulfilment, and may you always have the courage to pursue your dreams.

With warm regards and wishes,

Eulogy

In Loving Memory of Mrs. H. C. Lysander, M.A.,B.L.
Former Lecturer in Logic and Psychology, 1955–1998

The S.I.E.T. College family deeply mourns the passing of Mrs. H. C. Lysander, who passed away on 2 January 2026. A distinguished member of the teaching faculty, she served the institution with dedication and commitment for over four decades.

Mrs. Lysander's years at S.I.E.T. College were marked by her devotion to teaching and her enduring affection for the institution. She cherished the academic environment, the bonds of fellowship among colleagues, and the opportunities to guide and inspire generations of students. Her association with the College remained a cherished part of her life, and she continued to hold its memories with great fondness.

The institution gratefully remembers her valuable years of service and her contribution to its academic legacy. Her dedication, warmth and lasting association with S.I.E.T. College will remain a treasured part of its history.

May her soul rest in eternal peace.

In Loving Memory of Mrs. Anne Vas
Former Lecturer,
Department of English (FN)

Mrs. Anne Vas devoted 33 years of dedicated service to the institution and retired in 2001, following a long and fruitful career. She was a beloved and popular teacher who earned the respect and admiration of generations of students through her exceptional teaching skills, warmth, and kind-hearted nature.

Drama was her special forte, and she took great joy in organising the various dramatic activities of the Department. With her enthusiasm, creativity, and encouragement, she brought out the hidden talents of many students and provided them with opportunities to discover and express their potential. Her contribution to the cultural and academic life of the institution will always be remembered with gratitude.

It is with deep sorrow that we mourn the passing of such a warm, gracious, and endearing soul. Mrs. Anne Vas passed away on 12 April 2026, leaving behind cherished memories in the hearts of her colleagues, students, and all those whose lives she touched.

As we remember her life and legacy, we pray that the Almighty may bless her soul with eternal peace and grant her the highest rewards in the life hereafter.

May her soul rest in eternal peace.

In Loving Memory of Mrs. Aliya Shireen
Department of English, Class of 2021

It is still difficult to believe that Aliya is no longer with us. She was a proud alumna of our college and later became a beloved member of the Department of English (Afternoon Session), where she worked as a Guest Lecturer from January 2024 to February 2026, days before her untimely demise. Aliya was sincere, hardworking, kind-hearted, and always willing to help. She shared a special bond with her students and colleagues and was someone they could easily approach and talk to. She was always keen on making herself more academically qualified, and in 2025, she successfully cleared both the NET and SET examinations. The same year, she also published her first poetry collection, Life, Inked: The Cadence of My Being, reflecting her love for literature and writing.

She will be remembered for her love of words and her passion for poetry. For me, and for those who knew her, she will always be remembered not only as a teacher and poet, but as a warm and genuine person who brought kindness wherever she went. Her time with us was too short, but the memories she has left behind will always remain with us. May Allah forgive her, shower her with His mercy, and grant her the highest place in Jannatul Firdous. Aameen.
